Uniondale-based law firm Ruskin Moscou Faltischek has expanded its commercial legal services, adding an insurance and insurance litigation practice group.

Michael Brown, a partner at the firm, is the group's chair.

"The creation of a standalone, specialized insurance group will enable our firm to help our clients with any kind of insurance problem, whether it be a coverage problem or a need for assistance in structuring an insurance program or in self-insuring through the vehicles of a captive insurance company or other "alternative risk mechanism," Adam Silvers, the firm's managing partner, said in a statement.

Also practicing in the group are Adam Browser, Matthew Bryant, Nicole Della Ragione, Neil Diskin, Gavin Grusd, Ross Kartez, Brian Passarelle, Michael Schoenberg and Elizabeth Sy.

"For an insurer, a broker or an insured party, today's commercial and corporate insurance world can become complex and nuanced in a hurry," Brown said in a statement.

He added that the practice group "will help our clients structure insurance programs, navigate state and federal regulations, and protect themselves from legal claims or fraud."
